

Satellite radio offers the variety that one can not find on local radio stations. I have chosen to pay for the service and feel that service should not fall under the dictation of the NAB. As with many "paid" services offered, some organization wants to step in and control or limit what is offered. Let something that works for people, especially the paying people, be left alone to work. If local stations offered more variety, less needless chatter and fewer commercials, maybe they would not feel so threatened. If I heard one more Safford Dodge commercial while driving in I-95 traffic I thought I might lose it. The local traffic station on XM offers quick, accurate reports without having to be sold another car or changing my wireless carrier.
